

Curriculum Vitae

Notarization. I have read the following and certify that this curriculum vitae is a current and accurate statement of my professional record.

Signature Alan Neustadt Date October 17, 2013

Please organize your CV in order of the following: primary headings in bold (e.g. 1. Personal Information), sub-headings in underline (e.g. 1.c. Educational Background), and numbered items within sub-headings (e.g. 2.a.ii Books Edited). In your CV, for uniformity, please use exactly the same headings / sub-headings / numbered items as below.

1. Personal Information

a. 104423019, Neustadt, Alan, Department of Sociology, University of Maryland, 301-405-6411
smilex3@umd.edu

b. Current Academic Appointment

Alan Neustadt, Sociology, Associate Professor, year of University, 1993

c. Other Academic Appointments while at UMD

d. Educational Background

Ph.D. Sociology Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 1987.

M.A. Sociology Department, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 1982.

B.A. Bates College, Lewiston, Maine, 1979.

e. Employment Background

Appointments prior to UMD

2. Research, Scholarly and Creative Activities

For each of the categories listed below follow this guideline:

- *Published works should be listed first, in either chronological order or its inverse, followed (or preceded) by works not yet published but accepted for publication Error! Bookmark not defined.
- The individual should distinguish between authored and edited works and between refereed and unrefereed outlets and should clarify the status of unpublished works (e.g. accepted, in press).
- All authors should be listed in the order they appear on the publication.
- In exceptional cases, e.g., when the work is a product of a large group (more than 10 authors), not all authors need be listed. As an example, he/she may list the first three, the last three, and the individual him/herself (including his/her place in the total author list). That is, if an individual named "Candidate" is the 97th author, the citation may be listed as: Smith, Jones, Curley...Candidate (97th)...Moe, Larry, Shemp (total of 189 authors).
- *Individuals should designate the identity of the author with intellectual leadership on jointly authored papers (if this designation can be appropriately ascertained) by using * or by placing that name in bold*

- Identify which co-authors they mentored as undergraduate and graduate students, postdoctoral researchers, faculty research assistants, and junior faculty.
- When the research is published in a foreign language, the translation of the title should be included.

3. Teaching, Mentoring and Advising.

a. Courses Taught

Include courses taught in the last five years. Indicate approximate enrollments and any unusual formats.

SOCY201, Introductory Statistics for Sociology, 80 students.

SOCY201BL, Introductory Statistics for Sociology, 40 students. This is a blended or hybrid version of SOCY201.

SOCY401, Intermediate Statistics for Sociologists, 25 students.

SOCY602, Statistics For Sociological Research II, 20 students.

SOCY699C, Introduction to Computing for Sociologists, 20 students

SOCY699I, Statistical Techniques, 15 students.

b. Course or Curriculum Development

SOCY201BL, Introductory Statistics for Sociology. I have developed this course as part of an experiment to compare the outcomes and pedagogical processes in a blended online course (flipped classroom) compared to a traditionally taught lecture/lab course. This involved rewriting lectures and class materials for video, shooting and editing the video, and organizing the course on Canvas and Coursera, two different content deliver and learning systems. I have also identified different video resources and have organized and merged three sources of videos: 1) Coursera lectures, 2) Youtube videos, and 3) video content I have created. This has been and continues to be a large undertaking, significantly more work than teaching a traditional course, at least initially. I have also had to learn two different information communication technologies to distribute the course content.

SOCY699C, Introduction to Computing for Sociologists. All of the material for this course have been revised to reflect the latest version of Stata, the statistical application that is the focus of the course. This was required when the College upgraded from version 12 to version 13. I have moved a significant portion of the course content to an online Stata usersite to facilitate teaching and am creating video content of all the course materials so this class can be taught as a blended or hybrid course on statistical programming and applications.

SOCY699I, Statistical Techniques. I am creating online video content that students can watch outside of class so we can expand the range and depth of topics taught in this required course for graduate students.

c. Teaching Innovations

Include Software, New Programs and Other Contributions to Teaching.

- i. Software, Web Pages, Online Education
See section b. (Course or Curriculum Development) above

CTE Learning Enhancement Mini-Grants, 2013. My LEM research award is supporting redesigning a large existing traditional undergraduate statistics course, SOCY201, to deliver content online, blended with lab exercises organized around current sociological research and practice. Furthermore, I am conducting a quasi-experiment comparing blended to traditional sections of the introductory statistics class.

I am using video lectures and Web based technologies to 1) move lecture content out of the classroom, 2) move all course assessments online to provide timely and thorough evaluation of comprehension of the material, 3) support online discussion and office hours, and 4) use short message service text based micro-polls to guide course materials and discussion.

Additionally, I am using this opportunity to teach a traditional and blended version of the course in the same semester to quantitatively and qualitatively make direct comparisons of these two teaching methods. Quantitative comparisons of course assessments will instruct about the relative efficacy of these teaching methods and qualitative methods will allow for evaluation not tied to rigidly defined measures to understand the experiences of the students.

Finally, I hope this course development will be used to inform the Sociology and other faculty about new technologies and teaching methods to help them prepare similar blended courses.
